To Participants in the Plenary Session of the Pontical Academy of Social Sciences	O Photos
Clementine Hall
EN - ES - IT] Distinguished Ladies and Gentlemen, am pleased to welcome you, the members of the Pontifical Academy of Social Science which was founded thirty years ago. Our thoughts go to the President, who has gone ome because her mother is dying; let us say a prayer for her and for her mother. I gre he Chancellor and Vice-Chancellor and their staff, and I thank them for their work.
appreciate the fact that you have chosen as the theme of this Plenary Assembly the uman experience of disability ; the social factors that determine it, and the need to fost culture of care and inclusion . The Academy of Social Sciences is called to face, in coordance with a transdiscipinary model, some of the most urgent challenges of the resent time. I am thinking, for example, of technology and its implications for research ind for fields such as medicine and ecological transition. I also have in mind ommunications and the development of artificial
